32 Months Spying for the U.S.: Soviet Defector Reveals Details

New York Times Service NEW YORK — For 32 months before he defected to the United States in 1978, Arkady N. Shev-chenko, a top Soviet diplomat, passed Soviet secrets to American agents while serving as undersecre-tary-general of the United Nations, the defector says in a new book.

Mr. Shevchenko, the highest-ranking Soviet official ever to defect, says he gave the United States information on Soviet positions in the strategic arms limitation talks, told of frictions and maneuvers inside the Kremlin, and provided secrets on Soviet plans in Europe, Africa, Central America and other foreign policy arenas.

Before he stopped spying when confronted with a summons to re-turn to Moscow, Mr. Shevchenko also gave the United States exten-we Soviet cable traffic to and from the United Nations and Washington, enabling the Americans to decode a wide range of other secret Soviet messages around the world.

But as investigators fanned out beyond West Germany — to South Africa and Sweden, the United States and Panama, Austria, Britain, France and Switzerland — Mr. Mueller was revealed as a kingpin of Soviet industrial espionage and possibly even a Soviet spy.

In the Soviet-American talks on a second strategic arms agreement, Mr. Shevchenko said, he provided advance information on Soviet positions. He also said that Soviet leaders believed the United States was ahead in these arms and that they wanted to use the talks to slow down the momentum of American technology.

In other areas, Mr. Shevchenko supplied information on Soviet intentions in Angola and the Horn of Africa, He said the Kremlin was looking for a way to avoid a fight between Somalia and Ethiopia, wanting both as allies, and only after war started did Moscow reluctantly side with Ethiopia.

France, which has not previously suffered from leftist terrorism by French groups, has moved closer to NATO recently: Mr. Mitterrand campaigned for the missile deployment and the French Army has been reorganized to create a special force to reinforce West Germany in wartime.

Reagan Offers Budget in 'Spirit Of Compromise'

WASHINGTON - President no limits. Ronald Reagan, formally presenting his $973.7-billion budget for the 1986 fiscal year, offered Monday to work with a recalcitrant Congress "in a spirit of compromise and cooperation."

Congressional leaders of both parties have insisted for weeks that further cuts in domestic programs, already trimmed during Mr. Reagan's first term, would be difficult to enact without restraint in delense programs.

The new budget calls for a $30-billion increase in defense spending, while domestic spending would be cut nearly $40 billion.

The budget recommends sharp reductions in mass transit, housing and student aid; an end to the revenue-sharing program that turns federal tax dollars back to state and local governments; termination of the federal subsidy of the Amtrak rail-passenger system, and a 5-per-cent pay cut for all federal civilian workers.

Mr. Reagan met with the bipartisan congressional leadership at the White House to hand over the green, hard-bound, signed copies of his budget proposal.

When the president was asked if he would be able to get the proposal through Congress. Representaal through Congress, Representa-tive Jim Wright of Texas, the leader of the majority Democrats in the House of Representatives, suggest-ed that "some variation thereof" could be expected.

Mr. Reagan repeated the phrase, adding: "It just depends upon how close we all come." Right now, I'll settle for a tie," the president said. And, pressed again on whether alarming strength in the 1970s in west defense cuts, he would agree to defense cuts, he responded, "We'll have to talk about that."

endangering our national security."
Earlier, Republican and Democratic congressional leaders continued their criticism of the budget proposal

"The president, I must say, is in a fairly comfortable position," said Robert J. Dole of Kansas, the leader of the majority Republicans in the Senate. "He says, Don't touch Social Security. Don't touch defense. Don't raise taxes. And you can't touch interest on the debt." That doesn't leave a great deal.

That doesn't leave a great deal.

"Those of us in the Congress have to maybe look beyond some of the president's promises of the campaign," Mr. Dole added.

Mr. Wright said the proposed budget shows "a blind spot on the part of Mr. Reagan" and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

WASHINGTON - President Ronald Reagan, seeking to tapitalize on his election man-date, his personal popularity and a vigorous economy, is establishing the framework for his second term by proposing a politically risky budget that strikes heavily for the first time at numerous programs affecting the middle class.

"The hour of decision has arrived," said a key White House official. Another presidential aide said, "In a broad sense this budget is a reflection of the acceptance on our part that the Republican Party is acting like a majority party because we're now taking on some pretty powerful con-stituents, many of them our own."

Ranking administration officials acknowledge that the budget's proposals are far more sweeping and "grandiose" than those of 1981, when Mr. Reagan began his first term seeking to reduce inflation and to cut government spending in programs designed to help the poor. They concede that the reductions in the newest budget will fall hardest on businessmen, farmers and middle-income families. "We're going after those programs," said a White House official, "because that's all that's

2,300 U.K. Miners Abandon Strike

LONDON — British miners

abandoned their strike in record numbers Monday following the collapse of negotiations to end the 47-week-old walkout, the National Coal Board said.

The National Union of Mineworkers president, Arthur Scargill, raised hopes that there would be talks to end the strike by saying that the board had sent him "probably the most conciliatory letter we have had in months."

U.S. customs officers acknowledge that they were involved in trying to match the tapes found in Sweden to DEC equipment installed at Messerschmitt Already last fall, the West German government confirmed that Tornado secrets were lost because of an East German spy, Manfred Rotsch, who had access to it at Messerschmitt. But it is unclear whether a link existed between Mr. Rotsch and Mr. Mueller.

Greek Tanker Hit by Iraqi Missile

KUWAIT (Combined Dispatches) — A missile fired by an Iraqi warplane damaged a Greek oil tanker Monday near Iran's main oil export facility in the Gulf, it was reported here.

Greek officials in Athens confirmed that the Greek tanker Fairship-1 had been seriously damaged in an attack while en route to the Kharg Island oil terminal. None of the 26 crew members aboard the 132,000-tontanker was hurt.

The attack followed a week of heavy land fighting in the Gulf war. The Iraqi News Agency, in a report monitored Monday in Kuwait, quoted an Iraqi general as saying that his brigade had destroyed two Iranian army units in a battle last week, killing more than 1,500 men. He said the battlefield, in the central front, was "littered with Iranian dead soldiers." Meanwhile, there were reports that a fresh diplomatic effort was under way to end the war. In Kuwait, the newspaper Al-Seyassah said Sunday that France, Saudi Arabia and Algeria were working on a plan for talks with the support of the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council. (UPI, AFP)

Ulster Nationalist Plans to Meet IRA

LONDON (NYT) - John Hume, the leading Northern Ireland politician from a nationalist party that rejects violence, has said he plans to meet leaders of the Provisional Irish Republican Army despite opposition from the Irish prime minister and the British authorities. Mr. Hume, leader of the Social Democratic and Labor Party, said on Irish radio Sunday that he wanted to talk to the Army Council of the IRA "to say to them clearly I want them to end their campaign of violence."

The IRA said on Friday that it was willing to meet Mr. Hume.

The IKA said on Priory that it was wining to meet the Trame.

Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald, on the same program, said he recognized Mr. Hume's "courage and conviction," but that any such meeting would be broken up if it occurred in Ireland. Britain's secretary of state for Northern Ireland, Douglas Hurd, said that such a meeting would give credence to the idea that the IRA was a valid political force.

Seoul Pledges Kim Will Not Be Jailed

2 Guilty of Killing India Envoy in U.K. BIRMINGHAM, England (Reuters) — Two Kashmiris were found guilty Monday of murdering an Indian diplomat, Ravindra Mhatre, who was kidnapped last year.

A jury found Abdul Raja, 28, and Mohammed Riaz, 23, guilty at the end of a 16-day trial in Birmingham. They will be sentenced Thursday. Both pleaded not guilty. The prosecutor said that Mr. Mhatre had been killed by members of the Kashmir Liberation Front, which seeks independence from India and Pakistan.

Mr. Mhatre, 48, was an assistant commissioner at the Indian High ommission in Birmingham. He disappeared in February after leaving his office for home and was found shot and killed two days later in the countryside. Mr. Raja, who gave a Paris address, and Mr. Rizz, a student with an address in Leicester, England, were also found guilty of falsely imprisoning Mr. Mhatre. They denied that charge, too.

UN Panel Urged to Monitor Torture

GENEVA (Reuters) — The United Nations Human Rights Commission was urged by its outgoing chairman Monday to set up a system to monitor use of torture against prisoners. Peter Kooijmans of the Netherlands said at the opening meeting of the commission's 1985 session that torture remained a daily occurrence despite a convention to ban it adopted by the UN General Assembly in December. "Conventions alone are not sufficient to put an end to this crime," Mr. Kooiimans said.

The commission unanimously elected a former president and foreign minister of Bangladesh, Abu Sayeed Chowdhury, 64, to succeed Mr. Kooijmans as chairman of its six-week session.

It was unclear what effect the charges would have on plans for General Wojciech Januzelski, the Polish leader to visit India next week. Polish, East German and French officials all refused to comment on the charges.

A court official, who declined to be named, said that Mr. Narain had confessed to a 25-year involvement in industrial, military and political espionage.

Dennis and Cathy Hovis and their sons are not going to get cash from the government, although Mr. Hovis's 68-year-old mother, Olive, receives a monthly check from Social Security, the largest single item in Mr. Reagan's budget.

But the Hovis family, like every other household in the United States, will benefit from the budget through hundreds of federal services financed by hundreds of individual line items set forth in the proposal the president sent to Congress on Monday. Dennis Hovis, in turn, will pay for those services through various federal taxes — income, excise, employment, Social Security and others—levied on him other third pays for all other government programs, and his business, the Georgia Ann Style Shop, a busy hundreds of which find their way to the Hovis home clothing store on Main Street in this midwestern and Demis Hovis's business.

maintenance and repair yard, is a community of 6,200 people on a steep hillside about 40 miles (64 kilometers) south of St. Louis. In many ways, it is the archetype of the American small town, except for one distinction.

According to the Bureau of the Census, De Soto was the geographical "center of population" of the United ies when the 1980 census was taken. Spending a little time with the Hovis family makes it clear that the federal government is deeply woven into the fabric of daily life.

Mr. Reagan's budget proposal comprises three big categories. Just over one-third goes to direct grant programs, such as Social Security and food stamps, Just under one-third goes to military spending. The evidence of the U.S. government.

Much of what the Hovises eat has been checked for wholesomeness by federal egg meat, produce and dairy inspectors. The soft drinks in the refrigerator contain food coloring and sweeteners tested and certified by the Food and Drug Administration. Proto-types of the toaster and other appliances have been examined by engineers at the Consumer Product Safe-

Commission.

The nutrition statements on the certal boxes have been approved by the Federal Trade Commission. The heating coils in the oven have been tested for efficiency by the Department of Energy. Even the paint on the walls has been approved by the Environmental Protection Agency.

And, when Kathy Hovis does her grocery shopping, she pays an artificially inflated price for milk and other agricultural commodities because of federal programs to support farm prices. On the other hand, many line items in the federal budget save the Hovises money. Among the items in Mr. Reagan's proposal for the Department of Education is one that helps pay for city was ablunches at public schools. Betty Adams, bookkeeper at of interest. the De Soto School Board, says the municipality receives about $23,000 a month from the federal government to subsidize school lunches.

As a result, Kevin and David Hovis each pay only 85 cents a day for a hot lunch at Vineland Elementary School. Without federal funds, Mrs. Adams estimates, the boys would be charged 25 cents to 30 cents more.

The Hovis sons have access to a roomful of personal computers at their school, purchased with a $20,000 grant from the Department of Education.

Economists say the federal budget can be viewed as a huge income-redistribution machine: That is, every line item in the budget can be looked at as a source of income to somebody.

Dennis Hovis received this income in a direct form years ago. His father died when Mr. Hovis, now 36, was still in high school, making him eligible for Social Security survivor's benefits, monthly checks that pro-vided "a tremendous help at a time we really needed it," his mother recalled.

Today, as a successful businessman, Mr. Hovis pets no direct payments from the government, but he benefits from the mouthly flood of federal checks. "As a retailer, your sales are always better the first checks, railroad retirement checks and like that come in, and my customers receive them. And I can see the impact in my store."

State, county and local governments are other major beneficiaries of the federal budget. As a member of the De Soto City Council since 1981, Dennis Hovis has seen this firsthand.

According to Lawrence C. Palmer, De Soto's city manager, the municipality receives about $120,000 annually in federal revenue-sharing money. Although this represents a relatively small share of the city's $2.3 million annual budget, the council has become dependent on the check from Washington to buy such essential equipment as trucks and road-repair gear.

essential equipment as trucks and road-repair gear.

Now and again De Soto receives other benefits from the federal government, such as the $2.25 million that paid for 90 percent of the new water treatment plant. "Of course, it's only fair that the federal government should pay because it was the federal government that made us build a new plant in the first place," said Mr.

Palmer, the city manager,

De Soto also benefited from federal largess when it floated an industrial revenue bond to build a new plant for the Hamilton Shoe Co., one of the community's major employers. Because Washington has agreed not to tax the interest income from such bonds, the was able to sell the bonds at a below-market rate

In addition, Mr. Hovis and other Main Street basiness owners are hoping that Mr. Reagan's fiscal 1986 budget includes the $450,000 Community Action grant they are seeking to broaden the street and provide more parking for downtown shoppers.

Not everything about federal spending is good for business, however. Dennis Hovis moonlights as a life insurance salesman, and in this he finds himself in direct competition with Washington. Because of the hundreds of billions of dollars paid out through Social Security and other federal grant programs, people buy less private insurance than they would otherwise.

And of course, Mr. Hovis and other working people across the country must pay the $800 billion in taxes the Reagan budget calls for in fiscal 1986. Like other U.S. workers, Mr. Hovis runs into the federal budget every time he gets a paycheck. Although he is self-employed, he receives a quarter-ly check from the city for his services as a council member. The pay is $100 a year, but the quarterly check comes to $23.45.

"And I look at it," he said, "and I think, well, that other $1.55, I hope they're making good use of it in

N.Y. Has New Idea for Subway Justice

NEW YORK — In an attempt to bring swifter punishment to subway criminals, Mayor Edward I. Koch has proposed moving courts directly into some of the city's most troubled stations.

That would punish criminals more quickly, keep a better check on bail jumpers and free police from having to wait in courthouses, Mr. Koch and the deputy mayor, Stanley Brezenoff, said. A 24-hour full-scale court "in that vast underground at Times Square could determine penalties and decide who's to be held on bail," Mr. Brezenoff said.

Mr. Koch noted out that judges previously had been assigned to a jail and to a mental hospital.

Botha's Hint of Wisdom

Armed with new constitutional powers, President P.W. Botha of South Africa now talks of some new concessions to a powerless black majority. He hints at reviewing cruel housing laws and providing some form of "consultation" with blacks inside the airtight compartments of apartheid. But more surprisingly, he has dared mention the hitherto unmentionable — the possible release from prison of rights leader Nelson Mandela. For 21 years, Mr. Mandela has been serving a sentence of life imprisonment for allegedly promoting violence and revolution. The African National Congress, which he led, has been outlawed as a "Soviet surrogate." What a sur-prise, therefore, when Lord Bethell, a British Conservative, was allowed to interview South Africa's best-known prisoner, who said during the meeting: "The armed struggle was forced upon us by the government, and if they want us to give it up, the ball is in their court. They must legalize us, treat us like a political party and negotiate with us. Until they do, we will have to live with the armed struggle,"

Taking up the ball, which he may have served in the first place, Mr. Botha told his parliament he would consider releasing Mr. Mandela, Mr. Botha asserted: "All that is required of him is that he should unconditionally reject violence as a political instrument."

If so, would the government then deal with a legalized African National Congress? Might it operate under a new name? Could it and Mr. Mandela advocate peaceful change? Mr. Botha did not say, but his suggestion points the way toward a possibly significant bargain.

Legalizing the black congress would not abandon white rule, only provide blacks with an outlet for their grievances, a structure for making leaders and an instrument for petitioning. It would mark a return to the less repressive 1950s, when apartheid was aborning. Dealing humanely and politically with dissenters at home could be a pragmatic corollary to Pretoria's new policy of treating with leftists in Mozambique, Angola and Namibia. If that is Mr. Botha's aim, he could not only improve South Africa's reputation but gain valuable time for a peaceful passage away from racism.

What truly threatens South Africa's social peace is a system that denies 21 million blacks the most basic political rights, even as 4.5 million whites prosper on their labor. The blacks are condemned as inferior in fact and law. They cannot vote. They must carry passes to travel from ghettos to work. And they cannot protest their bondage without risking jail. If victims of the system could challenge it, their oppressors would fear change less.

The Talk With Mr. Castro

It is always good to hear Fidel Castro call for improved relations with the United States, as he did in an interview with The Washington Post published Monday. But considering the historical record, not to speak of Mr. Castro's fine print, the prospect does not seem so good.

The record shows that for at least 10 years Cuba and the United States have been discussing the worthy but modest items - immigration, travel, hijacking, coast guard, fishing, radio stations - on their bilateral agenda. Progress on particular items is occasionally made: Just last December the Reagan admin-istration, abandoning its refusal to talk with Cuba, made its first agreement with Havana, on immigration. But the items that remain to be discussed are, as Mr. Castro says, less important. Long ago the two countries found they could live with ragged bilateral ties. Full agreement on all the items extant would not materially alter the basic hostility.

Mr. Castro says he sees no sign of a basic American policy change. Mercifully, there has been a change since the shameful episode in which official U.S. efforts at sabotage and assassination were undertaken. These have been exposed and repudiated. But in another sense, Mr. Castro is right. No single American regional policy has shown more consistency longer than the general American outlook on Cuba. John F. Kennedy defined it in 1963, saying no real progress was possible until Cuba changed its relationship with the Soviet Union and its support of revolution, Mr. Castro has now reaffirmed that these fundamental elements of his policy are still in place. He has always been ready to "normalize" relations by which he means to accept the end of the American trade embargo and other forms of American pressure. But, as he emphasized again during the Post interview, he has never been ready to improve relations at the expense of his general foreign policies or, as he says, his moral principles This was not Mr. Castro's only reference to morality in the Post interview. He cited, at length, his moral values in volunteering a re-jection of a charge in a Post editorial of Dec. 17, 1984, that he had cynically dumped mental patients and criminals on the United States in the 1980 Mariel boatlift. One can understand why Mr. Castro would like to erase that sequence from his and others' minds. Permit us to restate the record here:

Three Cubans, desperate to leave the island paradise, had broken through police lines into the Peruvian Embassy compound. Spitefully, Mr. Castro removed the police and challenged what he still chooses to call "anti-social elements" or "lumpens" to get out. Some 10,000 Cubans flooded the compound, to go not to the golden United States but to poor Peru. An embarrassed Mr. Castro, hunting for a way to identify the departures with Cuba's traditional foe, opened the port of Mariel for a boatlift to Miami. Among the 125,000 who left were inserted thousands of criminals and mental patients, their status compellingly established by their own and their boat mates' testimony. It was cynical of Mr. Castro to dump them then, and it is cynical of him to deny it now.

— THE WASHINGTON POST.

Other Opinion

Turkey Is Winning the War

One man's war is another man's profit, and Turkey has been doing very nicely out of the conflict between its neighbors Iran and Iraq. With the signing on Jan. 22 of an agreement between Turkey and Iran to look into building pipelines for Iranian oil and gas through Tur-key, the Turks are on their way to fulfilling a long-held ambition. This agreement should help them sort out their Kurdish problem.

Turkey has picked up a lot of trade as a result of the war. The Turkish goods now being bought by the warring states have helped to revive the flagging Turkish economy. Turkey now sells more goods to Iran than to any other country: Iranian orders for Turkish goods, which stood at $85 million in 1980, rose to $1.1 billion in 1983. Meanwhile, Iraqi imports of Turkish products have nearly tripled.

Iran's stranglehold on the Gulf at the Strait of Hormuz has forced Iraq to export its oil overland. But since Iran's ally Syria closed one Iraqi pipeline, Iraq has had to rely on the one passing through Turkey. Iran is now in a similar position: In the past eight months, Iraqi attacks on tankers have made it increasingly difficult for Iran to get its oil out from Kharg Island. This, together presumably with the assumption that the war will run and run, has pushed Iran into an accord with Turkey.

Iranians and Turks will meet this month to talk about plans for two pipelines, one for oil and one for gas, running through Kurdistan either to the Mediterranean or to the Black Sea. Turkey will thus get preferential access to Iranian, as well as Iraqi, oil and gas, and the money from the transit dues. The result, if the project comes off, could be Iraqi and Iranian pipelines running side-by-side through the Turkish countryside. Turkey will thus get preferential access to Iranian, as well as Iraqi, oil and gas, and the money from the transit dues. The Turks also hope the deal will persuade Iran into cooperating with them against Kurdish separatist guerrillas. - The Economist (London).

Yalta's 40th Anniversary

For tens of millions in central and eastern Europe, Yalta is the enduring symbol of their betrayal by the West into Soviet bondage. Yalta means the root of all their present political evils. Yalta means the Fall. Increasingly, people in the West share this view of Yalta as the root cause of Europe's present woes. It is not the mere fact of treating with the Russians which is dangerous: It is the illusions which have repeatedly arisen from such treating - from Yalta to Helsinki. In Western democracies, these illusions are of two kinds: the illusions of political leaders themselves, and those of the public which elects those leaders. In his memoirs, Churchill quotes an embarrassing economism he gave to Soviet leaders ("their word is their bond"). And the British politician comments: "I felt bound to proclaim my confidence in Soviet good faith in the hope of procuring it." The Helsinki process may yet be part of overcoming Yalta.

RENÉ BONDY

1910: Fire Destroys Army Medicines NEW YORK — Three-quarters of the entire medical supplies of the United States Army were destroyed by a fire [on Feb. 4] which destroyed a seven-story building in West Street, New York. It is not known how the conflagration originated. A few moments after the outbreak a series of violent explosions shook the neighborhood like an earthquake. Major Edwin P. Wolfe was in command of the depôt, and with thirty subalterns, had a narrow escape. All egress was cut off by the flames, but finally fire escapes were run up to the fourth story and the officers slid down safely. Their clothes were hadly singed. In the cellars of the building were 10,000 gallons of petrol, benzoline and alcohol, which was flooded just in time to prevent a grave disaster.

FROM OUR FEB. 5 PAGES, 75 AND 50 YEARS AGO

1935: World Air Force Is Foreseen GENEVA - The League of Nations sees in the London agreement the first arrangement for automatic sanctions against an aggressor, and the embryo of an international air force. The agreement between Paris and London to join in immediate reprisal, if either is attacked from the air, is considered to show the way for general action against any state which violates peace. Germany's acceptance or rejection of the proposal will not affect the Anglo-French agreement to guarantee their own security. Indeed, League officials do not expect Germany's return to Geneva, and, except for the air accord, the London provisions are considered to have little more than tactical significance. [But] automatic air reprisals, it is felt, may yet solve the weakness of the League Covenant.

Arms Control Talks In making "The Case Against Belief in Arms Control" (Jan. 25), Norman Podhoretz distorts the facts. If, as he writes, the democracies had unilaterally cut back on defense after the SALT agreements, why is it that the overall number of nuclear arms has not diminished, as he correctly states? Would he have us believe that all these new weapons are on the Other side? The truth is that no NATO member state has slashed its military budget and the U.S. doubled defense spending between 1976 ($90 billion) and 1982 ($185 billion). Even allowing for inflation, that can hardly be called a cutback. What is more irrational, the hope millions of people put in arms control negotiations or Mr. Podhoretz's own phobia of "the enemy?" Isn't it the latter that helps prevent the reasonable quid-pro-quo policy now necessary?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR "actual malice" when it reported on

HERBERT H. GRAF.

Time of Trial

Regarding the report "Sharon Loses Libel Case as Jurors Find No Malice" (Jan. 25) by John Dayle: Sidetracked by the question of whether Time magazine acted with the standards of our journalists.

The fact remains that an American court has determined that Time was careless, even negligent in its erroneous, defamatory reports on Mr. Sharon. I am disappointed that though you have been able to report that Time has been reviewing its procedures and scrutinizing its personnel, you have not yet been able to report that Time has dismissed their reporter David Halevy with a severance payment and asked Mr. Sharon to bill them for all his expenses.

That Time has not done so suggests to me that Time might possibly be

U.S. Declaration of Independence on Third World bing UNESCO and a resource-grabbing world bureaucracy at Washington — A strong, new American policy has been evolving toward the "Third World." The new way was found with LOST, the most apt acronym of the postwar era - the Law of the Sea Treaty, a grab for the natural resources of the next century by the politicians representing the most backward and totalitarian nations.

The Reagan administration refused to sign LOST because it did not want the United States to become a party to the socialization of the sea, setting up an unaccount-able and self-perpetuating world bureaucracy dedicated to regulat-ing and taxing free enterprise. The decision to turn back from the brink of LOST infuriated the devotees of world government. Denunciations of our "lawlessness came from the back seats of limousines with diplomatic license plates everywhere, and liberal establishmentarians here excoriated the decision to put our national self-interest and principles of a free economy ahead of "world opinion."

True, the United States was "iso-lated," but gained the quiet respect of allies who recognized belatedly that the Most Backward Nations often manipulated by the Soviet bloc and the Arab bloc — had tak-en control of the United Nations. With the trap of LOST averted, President Reagan focused on the dirty little secret of the United Nations: the high living and rampant corruption in UNESCO, where Director-General Amadou Mahtar M'Bow of Senegal blew hundreds of millions on "administrative exBy William Safire penses" in Paris, with the U.S. taxpayers carrying most of the burden. When we withdrew from the financing of that playpen for Third-World diplomats and their inamoratas, Mr. M'Bow bired a Washington publicity firm for $15,000 a month to whip up the usual establishment support for subsidizing international organiza-tions. The whitewash failed; the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization is so blatantly anti-freedom, anti-United States and anti-Israel that not even the most liberal knees will jerk. Britain

Not surprisingly, the Third World and Soviet-bloc politicians at the Hague have reached beyond all precedent to take up the cause of the Communist regime in Nicara-gua against the United States. The charges suit the propaganda of both the Soviet Union and Nicaragua. The Reagan response to a power-grabbing World Court is the same as his response to a money-grab-

LOST: America will not submit. The essential reason we will not submit our national security decisions to a foreign court, or continue to finance personal and political corruption at UNESCO, or turn over the freedom and resources of the sea to the world boondogglers. is this: Our national interest in freedom, justice and democracy is far greater than our concern for an increasingly strident, intolerant and often corrupt elite that claims to represent "world opinion."

That is why the taunt of Nicaragua's defenders in the United States - that our refusal to submit to the Hague court's certain judgment is an admission of guilt — has so little sting. The place for the United States to debate the morality of our methods of hemispheric defense is in the U.S. Congress, not in some Third Worldly star chamber. In our Declaration of Independence, "a decent Respect to the Opinions of Mankind" compelled us to give our reasons for separa-tion. The word "decent" in that time and context meant "fitting"; but as Third World dictators took over international bodies, such respect ceased to be fitting

Our new independence from backward-nation majorities will not isolate us from sensible allies. Our respect for world opinion should be measured by the Third World's respect for democracy and freedom, and for the superpower that makes those values possible.

A Look at the Wrongs of America's Political Right

By William Pfaff

PARIS — The opinion that the United States is an exception to the rule of history, an impartial and uniquely disinterested force in world affairs, has been an important factor in the transatlantic relationship. This was so at the time of World War I and the Versailles Treaty, and again during the 1940s and 1950s. It had, however, to fade. Americans may have their share of idealism. but they have interests too. They sometimes find the two difficult to distinguish and certainly make mistakes. Vietnam, and the presidencies of Richard Nixon and Jimmy Carter, produced a different European view of America. This marked an important change in the Atlantic alliance and in a measure, a destabilizing one.

Now Europeans hear from Washington a new expression of American exceptionalism. The people in and around the Reagan administration maintain that they have seen the future, that it works (the most rapid U.S. growth in gross national product for 33 years), and that it will work for every other country, too, from Fin-land through to Bangladesh.

These Americans have a message to preach, that of free-market, supply-side, economics, and the reduc-Individual and group initiatives are to take over from central government, so far as this can be done. The difficulties to be expected in adapting the American new right's political program to societies organized in a different way than federal America, with different historical expectations of government, does not cause these Americans much pause. They are not really interested in foreign complications, and in any case easily find acolytes abroad for whom citing the American message is a useful weapon in their own political battles. This is the case in France, where the Ameri-

A useful classification of the right as it exists in contemporary Europe identifies, first, the business-minded right, favoring the free market, traditional in social and political outlook. Next is the nationalist and authoritarian right ("Bonapartist" in France). Lastly, there is an intellectu-al and "realist" right, which includes major thinkers like Alexis de Tocqueville in France, Edmund Burke in England, the late Raymond Aron in France. An equivalent tradition does not exist on the American right.

That tradition exists nonetheless in the United States, Walter Lippmann, Hannáh Arendt, Hans Morgenthau, Reinhold Niebuhr and George Kennan have been among its representa-tives in recent U.S. university life and journalism. But the American right regards such people as dangerous leftists, chiefly because they are, or have been, opposed to the aggressive nationalism and the Manichaean world view of the right.

The result has been the decapita-American right, as it is today, comanti-Communism. Intellectually it is, is still a long way to go.

President Reagan no longer jokes about releasing bombs over the Soviet Union, and Soviet leaders have stopped warning their people about the imminence of war and the resemblance between Hitler and Mr. Reagan. ment also involves action on our side. Without meaning to trivialize the dimensions of the dispute, the quarel between the Soviet Union and the United States is in some small way like a quarrel between husband and wife. Both sides may have to give. What can we do to signal our mutual intentions? For our part, we should offer the Soviet Union something that it wants, but it should not be anything that threatens our security. Allowing the Soviet Union "most-favored-nation" status in trade would be such a signal.

Since only the president can aus rize a waiver for the resumption of such status if the Soviet liberalizes emigration, that will also require action on the part of the Soviet Union. Since emigration, primarily of Jews but also of Germans and Armenians, has been cut from more than 50,000 a year in 1979 to under 1,000 in 1984, that will not be easy but is possible. Strict interpretation in the 1970s of the Jackson-Vanik amendment restricting most-favored-nation status was in part responsible for the emi-gration that the Soviets did allow. Despite all their protestations, the Soviets do at times respond to pressure. They did then, and they did again out of fear of the "Star Wars" missile defense proposal when they agreed to return to Geneva. But just as the stick has its use, so does the carrot. The Russians thought that we had agreed to extend most-favored-nation status to the in 1972, and felt betrayed when the did not get it. In retaliation they all but eliminated emigration.

This is a unique opportunity, but, given our mutual distrust, it will not be easy to break the logiam. Each see will have to make some small gentures. The Soviets could release Ida Nudel, one of the more celebrated refuseniks, but Jewish groups here will have to signal their willingness to be more flexible about such issues as most-favored-nation status.

Assuming that the Soviet Union continues to increase the number of emigrants and show a more humane policy, the president should be urged to consider issuing an annual wares to the Jackson-Vanik Amendma There is much more involved here than the narrow interests of one religious group. Such a move could contribute to a meaningful improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations.

In an interview on Sunday, Mr.

Ortega said the expanding United States-Honduran military maneuvers just across the border and the administration's halting of talks with Nicaragua in Mexico were signs of what he called a toughen-ing line in Washington. He also noted the U.S. withdrawal from a case before the International Court of Justice at The Hague, which was hearing a Nicaraguan complaint of aggression.

"All of these point to the fact that the administration has not decided in favor of a political solution and has not discarded a military solution," Mr. Ortega said. He said the Sandinist government was "still obliged to think that the danger of an invasion is present" and would keep up its grand. Mr. Ortega has raised similar alarms about a U.S. invasion in times of tension in the past, including during elections in Nicaragna late last year and when Washington charged, incorrectly, in early No-vember that the Soviet Union may have shipped MiG fighter planes to Nicaragua. Once, he even gave a equipped and trained by the Cendate that an invasion would occur

Sunday seemed not so much an expression of genuine fear of inva-sion, but an indication that, after a period of some dialogue between the two countries, relations were becoming hostile again.

"That would bring us closer and closer to direct acts of aggression by the U.S. against Nicaragna," he asserted. "And then the U.S. administration would feel that it has bipartisan support for its more ag-gressive policies here." Mr. Ortega blamed Washington for ending the talks between the two countries. He said the United States was not genuinely supportive of a parallel, regional negotiating effort, the Contadora peace process undertaken by Mexico, Panama, Venezuela and Colombia. By ending the bilateral talks, Mr. Ortega asserted, the United States

Accidental Perfume Mixture Turns Into 'Scent of the Century'

By Judy Klemesrud New York Times Service

NEW YORK — The strong, sweet smell of Giorgio, "the scent of the century," as its creators like to call it, waited through the door of a Hotel Pierre suite here the other day. Inside, Gale and Fred Hayman of Beverly Hills were waiting to talk about Giorgio, the benomenon that has rocked the ragrance industry. They have been divorced for seven years but are still in business together.

"She wanted something that was ssertive," Fred Hayman, 59, said, gesturing toward his former wife, whom he jokingly calls "the mad-

"I wanted something that was noticeable, but not vulgar," Mrs. Hayman, 38, added. "When you're paying $150 an ounce, it shouldn't ust disappear after an hour."

Chorgio, as anyone with a nose knows, is everywhere. Farrah Fawcett wears it, Jacqueline Bisset wears it, even Michael Jackson wears it. It has become so recognizable that doormen and cab drivers have been known to call out "Giorwhen women wearing it walk

Last year, the three-year-old fragrance with the strong floral scent had $60 million in sales in about 180 stores, four times the $15 million it brought in in 1983. That made Giorgio the industry's hottest seller since Revion introduced Charlie in 1973. This year, the Hay-mans expect sales to top $100 mil-

Lester Gribetz, executive vice president and general merchandise manager of Bloomingdale's, said, 'In my experience, in the history of fragrance in America there is no uccess story like Giorgio."

How did the fragrance come so ar so fast? For one thing, it had a built-in cachet through its association with Giorgio, the chic Beverly Hills boutique Hayman founded in 1961. The shop was the model for "Scruples" in the best-selling novel of that name by Judith Krantz.

The fragrance was launched in November, 1981, at a black-tie party for 1,200 in a huge yellow and white striped tent in a parking lot across from the Giorgio boutique. It was catered by five leading Beverly Hills restaurants, with the 100piece Beverly Hills High School marching band providing a halftime show. In December the Haymans introduced a men's cologne, Giorgio for Men, which has its own woodsy scent. The beginning is great. Hayman said, adding that the men's cologne already has a sales volume equal to 20 per cent of that of the women's fragrance. A fourounce crystal flask costs $35.

Mrs. Hayman disclosed that she is working on a second fragrance, in case someone comes up with a cheaper imitation of Giorgio that diminishes the original, "or if anything else happens to make it a more common fragrance."

Hayman, who was born in Switzerland, was managing the Beverly Hilton hotel in Beverly Hills in the early 1960s when he hired Gale Miller, whom he later married, to

Modern Arbitragers Are 'In Truth, Simply Bankers'

By H.J. MAIDENBERG New York Tunes Service

EW YORK — Whenever stockbrokers or analysts are at a loss to explain brief but sharp price movements, as has been the case recently, many of them attribute the cause to "arbitrage operations" or to developments in the equally esoteric index futures and options markets.

To some extent, the explanations are correct, for the index markets have become prime tools for arbitragers and integral, if often little understood, facets of the equities markets. Just how do stock arbitragers operate? "By the textbook, we try to find a stock that is trading

'Communications has at slightly different prices in two markets," said I.B. Krim, senior vice president at Rothschild Inc., the New York branch of the international banking house, which only handles institutional business.

lived.' But this is not the way the "arbs" operate today, Mr.
Krim quickly added, "because modern communications has made such price differentials extremely short lived. In truth, we arbs today are simply bankers. The price differentials we work with are interest rates, regardless of what stocks or index market

Martin B. Boorstein, another Rothschild senior vice president, gave one simple example:

"Suppose our borrowing cost is 10 percent, and we have used these funds to buy stocks similar to those represented in the 20-share Major Market Index futures on the Chicago Board of Trade. If we can sell MMI futures against these holdings at prices that are more than the 10-percent borrowing cost, it would be a classic and ideally profitable operation."

How? First, the "goods" were bought and sold in two markets (the stock and index futures markets) and at different prices.

Besides having in effect presold the portfolio at a price that was larger than the borrowed funds used to acquire the shares, the short index futures also served as a form of insurance against a price decline in the basket of actual shares held.

But it never is as simple as that, Mr. Krim noted, because of a number of factors. For one, all arbs closely watch the same interest rate-price structure. Also, there are the important dividend and timing factors.

OR example, Mr. Boorstein explained, the stocks measured by the MMI index used in his illustration had a total dividend yield of 4.5 percent Friday. Equivalent dividend yields on other popular indexes ranged from 4.2 to 5 percent.

Whether these dividends can be captured by the arbs depends on the timing of their operations. Most stock dividends, Mr. Boorstein noted, are payable four times a year: in February, May, August and November. Thus, the arb must weigh this dividend income against the cost of money, which in turn may be based on the rates currently offered on Treasury bills, as well as the expiration dates of the futures contracts to be sold short.

If the arbitrage operation involved the MMI options traded on the American Stock Exchange, the cost of the put premium would replace the price of the futures in calculating the potential profitability of the deal. Puts are the right to sell the underlying stock and serve much the same purpose as selling short.

the potential dividend income, the price of the forward futures and, in the case of index options, the cost of the premium," Mr. Krim said.

There are three important aspects that must be observed in arbitraging, Mr. Krim said. "One is that the arbitrage business can only work in lively markets. In dull periods, time can only work against you, especially in the futures and options markets. Second, arbs rarely take positions without first deciding on a profit goal. Arbitrage is not an open-ended affair." Third, he said, because of their ample credit and the large sums that they work with, arbitragers are usually content with many very slim profit margins, often no more than 1 percent or 2 percent, on operations that may last a few minutes or days.

German Jobless Increases

January Rate Is a Big Jump

Seasonally adjusted unemployment rose to 2.29 million last month from 2.23 million in December, the office reported.

The unadjusted figure was up from 2.54 million in January 1984, when the figure was 10.2 percent of the work force. The adjusted jobless total was 2.19 million in Janu-

The agency said 294.226 West Germans became unemployed during January, pushing the country's jobless rate to 10.6 percent from 9.4 percent in December.

In announcing the record unem-ployment figure, Heinrich Franke, the Labor Office president, put most of the blame on what he called an extraordinarily severe winter and a lack of orders in the construction industry. He said that the surge in joblessness, which he called unprecedent-ed since the post-war reconstruc-tion year of 1948, was a "temporary lapse" but one that would take some time to repair.

Publication of the unemployment figures coincided with a forecast by the Munich-based economic research institute, IFO, of a slight decline in average 1985 un-employment from 2.27 million last

It said much of the decline would be due to the effects of early retirement schemes and shorter working

It forecast no significant increase in the number of new jobs.

The institute said that orders in hand in the construction industry months from 2.5 months a year earlier.

The bad news came just days after Economics Minister Martin Bangemann unveiled a government economic forecast calling for un-employment to slip below the 2 million level this summer.

Particularly hard hit were the weather-sensitive construction and coal mining industries were the number of workers placed on curtailed shifts rose in January by 197.611 to 465.977.

On the bright side, the number of open job listings rose by 7,495 during the reporting month to 87,468. (UPI, Reuters)

Profit-Taking Pressures NYSE

Stock Exchange moved higher in active trading late Monday despite pressures of profit-taking following a sharp rise in January.

The Dow Jones industrial average was up

8.17 to 1,285.89 about an hour before the closing. Advances led declines by a 5-3 ratio. The five-hour volume was 91.9 million shares, compared with 89.9 million in the corresponding.

The stock market's uneven performance in any good news or lack of bad news. He said the advance was stimulated by several buying programs from institutional investors.

He said the "backing and filling" after January gains would be healthy. Mr. Katz predicted that the stock market would resume its advanceand head toward a Dow average of 1,350 over a period of several weeks.

Trude Latimer of Evans & Co. said selling dried up when the Dow dipped to the 1,270 level in early trading. She said the stock market was in an upward cycle with enough momentum to ignore questions about the direction of interest

President Ronald Reagan's budget proposals did not appear to be having much of an effect except to help defense issues, she said. The proposed budget for fiscal 1986 totals

$973.7 billion. Decades-old farm support programs would be drastically curtailed. The pay of federal workers would be cut 5 percent and direct lending by the Small But tration would be eliminated

The fiscal 1986 deficit is $180 billion in the budget projections, though the economy is

The stock market's uneven performance in the last half of 1984 was blamed on worries about budget deficits and the upward pressure on interest rates created by government borrow

The Treasury Department has a $19-billion quarterly refunding operation scheduled this week amid signs that the Federal Reserve may be tightening credit. The Dow set a record high of 1,292.62 last

"Any market that's moved as rapidly and strongly as this one has to be subject to profit-taking," said an investment adviser, David Poien. He said the rise resulted from a realization that "the economy is in good shape, interest rates seem to be staying down and inflation is

AT&T was near the top of the active list and up a fraction at midday. Actively traded IC Industries was higher following favorable mention in a newspaper article. Citicorp was higher at midday on heavy volume.

General Motors, which reported fourth-quarter earnings of $2.71 a share vs. $4.11 in the 1983 fourth quarter, was up a fraction at midday. Ford and Chrysler also moved higher.

Manufacturers Hanover completes another record year.

Extracted from a letter to shareholders by John F. McGillicuddy, Chairman.

"I am very pleased to report that our corporation's earnings reached a new high in 1984. In fact, our net income of $352.5 million represents this institution's 12th consecutive year of record results.

"Fourth quarter earnings totalled $106.2 million, an increase of 23 percent over last year's fourth quarter. Even more significant was the fact that our earnings per share for this period reached $2.14 up from $2.13 a year ago and $1.69 in the third quarter of 1984. This means that the dilution resulting from the issuance of common and preferred stock—both related to the acquisition of CIT Financial Corporation—has been reversed, and in only nine month's time.

"A major factor in this reversal was that CIT's performance more than lived up to expectations. Since it was acquired on May 1st, CIT has contributed $31.7 million to our bottom line-that, after all charges for interest-related financing costs and the amortization of the purchase premium. On a pro forma basis, had CIT been with us for the full year instead of only eight months, it would have contributed approximately $45 million. We expect CIT will contribute at an even higher level in 1985.

"Other highlights of the year worth noting include:

"A 35.7 percent increase in primary capi-tal, up $1.2 billion to $4.4 billion. This brought our ratio of primary capital to assets to 5.77 percent, up from 5.01 percent a year ago. In the past three years, we have added $2.2 billion to our primary capital base.

"A $198 million addition to our reserve for possible loan losses. This 45.8 percent increase in our reserves came after absorbing a record $259.2 million in net loan charge-offs. This means that despite the impact of a grossly uneven economic recovery, both at home and abroad, we were able to absorb our losses out of current earnings even as we bolstered our reserve by an additional $198 million. At year's end, our reserve totaled $630.7 million, representing a ratio of reserves to total loans of 1.08 percent, up from .90 percent a year ago.

"A 33 percent increase in other operating income to $823 million. This $204 million improvement means that we continue to derive an ever-growing share of our revenues from feebased services that make little or no claim on our capital ratios. Improvements came in virtually all sectors of our business, but were particularly strong in the areas of foreign exchange trading, securities trading and investment banking.

"On the international scene, progress continued to be made during the year, with a major debt restructuring for Mexico and with Argentina reaching agreement with the International Monetary Fund and major creditor banks. The result was a partial payment of past-due interest by Argentina at year's end. Despite this payment, our earnings for the year were reduced by $26.3 million aftertax by the impact of certain nonaccrual Argentine loans.

"Our strong performance in the fourth quarter, particularly given the challenges we faced, provides us with a great deal of momentum as we enter 1985."

Retail Sales Rose 2.27%

In Britain in December

Reuters

LONDON — The volume of retail sales in Britain rose 2.27 percent in December over the previous month, after revision for seasonal factors, the Department of Trade and Industry said Monday.

The department said that retail-sales volume for the last quarter — which is considered a better com-which is considered a better com-parison than the month-by-month figures — averaged 2 percent high-er than in the third quarter.

PARIS — The French government has sent a letter to the employers' association, the Patronat, calling for dividends to be held down in line with wages, the Finance Ministry said Monday.

The non-binding request proposes that dividend increases should, in most cases, be limited to 4.5 percent this year, the target level for both inflation and pay in-

But the letter suggests that higher payouts could be made by companies that had passed or reduced their dividends in the past three years as long as the distribution was covered at least three times by

What makes Morgan the most innovative bank in both the Eurobond and syndicated loan markets

When the leading participants in the world's capital markets were asked by Euromoney magazine which bank is the most innovative in the international bond and syndicated loan markets—"the best house for introducing successful new techniques"—Morgan ranked first in both areas.

"Morgan is a corporate finance-driven merchant bank, (which) may explain some of its inventiveness," Euromoney wrote in its commentary on the poll results. "It tends to see the securities business from a company's point of view; its corporate finance officers estimate how the bank's forex, swap and Eurobond capabilities can minimize costs and meet the particular needs of the client company."

Morgan has earned this recognition by putting our uniquely comprehensive set of capabilities to work for the long-term interests of our clients.

As a major participant in the capital, credit, and local currency markets, as well as in worldwide foreign exchange, government bond, and bullion markets, we have exceptional opportunities for exploiting intermarket arbitrage for the benefit of our clients in innovative ways.

☐ Morgan is the leading counterparty that can act with equal proficiency as either principal or agent in rate and currency swap transactions. Our especially strong capital position, reflected in our AAA/Aaa credit ratings, enhances our role as principal and can reduce client costs and risks in each swap we arrange.

Because Morgan concentrates on the international capital markets, we can devote all our worldwide resources to providing superior service in these markets to our clients.

A recent example of Morgan innovation:
For a $500 million Kingdom of Sweden floating-rate note issue, our Eurobond underwriting subsidiary, Morgan Guaranty Ltd, proposed the first U.S. Treasury-style auction in the international capital markets, then committed to place a competitive bid for the entire issue. The package gave Sweden the lowest cost related to the London Inter-Bank Deposit Bid Rate ever achieved in the Eurodollar floating-rate note market. And its success led to a second Swedish auction issue, for $700 million.

Other recent examples: profitable Deutschemark defeasance transactions for three major U.S. issuers, and zero-coupon Eurobond issues which we swapped into floating-rate funding for Electricité de France, Nordic Investment Bank, and Swedish Export Credit.

Measure our performance. Let us compete for your mandate. You'll find we deliver imaginative, cost-effective services in the capital markets with the same high quality and skill that have long been hallmarks of all Morgan banking business.

thing that could happen to a Christian." He doesn't say what it is, except by implication: the unwillingness to risk for the faith. Tutu the risk-taket is more to be honored than Tutu the political theorist. He is dead wrong when discussing racial alliances. "We have been deeply hurt," he writes. "We have seen that when it comes to the matter of Black freedom then we Blacks are really expendable in the view of the mighty U.S. It was a case of blood being thicker than water. You can't really trust Whites. When it comes to the crunch, whatever the morality involved, Whites will stick by their fellow Whites." That whites will stick by their renow whites. That isn't fiery rhetoric, it's flammatory falsity. What, for example, of the numberless white missionaries in Africa in the past decade who stayed with the blacks they were serving only to be martyred by marauding black soldiers? In an essay on the population removals of

In an essay on the population removals of South Africa. Tutu forcefully describes the suffering endured by blacks. "People are starving in most of these resettlement camps. I know, for I have seen it. They are starving not because of an accident or a missiortune. No, they are starving because of a deliberate Goventinent policy made in the name of White Christian civilization." What's needed right there is a balancing sentence or two, a few words on the starvation caused by the ineptitude and violence-based policies of some of Africa's black accurrance.

Africa's black governments.

There is probably little hope for it now, but Desmond Tutu ought to take the time — perhaps an hour a day in his study — and write a book that goes into his own deepnesses. What's offered here is useful, but it is too much a mixture of strengths and weaknesses. It is not held together by a prose style of any kind. Only now and again, does a line leap from the page, and the leaps aren't that high.

Perhaps it is too much to ask that men of God and peace be also men of literature. I recall an answer Tutu gave to a reporter's poignant question at the Washington Cathedral: How do you manage to be so cheerful a person amid such suffering in South Africa? He explained that the tears of joy and the tears of pain come from the same place — the human bearL

O'Meara Wins Crosby Golf by 1 Shot

PEBBLE BEACH, California (AP) — Mark O'Meara scored a one-shot victory Sunday in the 44th Bing Crosby golf tournament. The No. 2 money-winner on the PGA tour last season closed with a one-over-par 73 on the rain-dampened Pebble Beach Golf Links; his four-round total was O'Meara led by only one shot most of the way and had to sink parsaving putts of six feet (on the 15th and 16th holes) and 12 feet (on No. 17) to make it stand up. Curtis Strange, playing with O'Meara in the final group, missed a seven-footer on the 18th green that would have

Edberg Crushes Noah in Tennis Final

MEMPHIS, Tennessee (AP) — Stefan Edberg of Sweden trounced Frenchman Yannick Noah, 6-1, 6-0, Sunday to win the U.S. National indoor tennis championship. Edberg, seeded minth, had reached the final by eliminating defending champion and top-seeded Jimmy Connors.

The 19-year-old Edberg, who is ranked 19th among the world's touring pros, demolished Noah in 54 minutes. The winner made only three

USFL's New Chief to Make His Capital Hill Pitch

By Mark Asher

Washington Part Service WASHINGTON - Monday was Harry Usher's fourth official day as commissioner of the United States Football League, whose teams lost what he conservatively estimates at $100 million in its first two years. It also might prove to have been one of the most important days of his stewardship in deter-mining if the league will survive.

He was scheduled to testify at Senate Commerce Committee hearings on two bills that would restrict franchise relocation in professional sports. While other league executives are likely to ask Congress for additional antitrust exemptions, to relieve the bidding for teams in the wake of the Los Angeles Raiders' $49 million antitrust victory over the National Football League, Usher will argue other-

Late last week Usher said Congress is not considering "the root of the problem" in the two bills in the Senate Commerce Committee and two others scheduled for hearings Wednesday before the Senate Judiciary Committee. The root of the problem, he said, is an NFL monopoly created unintentionally by Congress when it granted antitrust exemptions in 1961 to pool television negotiations and in 1969 to enable the NFL to merge with the American Football League.
The AFL was on NBC Television, the NFL was on CBS; then the merged NFL added ABC for Monday night football in 1970. As a result, Usher said, it "becomes virtually impossible for a new league to compete on a firm economic basis." Although each of the three networks is a larger business than the NFL (gross revenues estimated at $750 million last season), Usher contends none of the three can "resist the incredible economic power that the NFL has."

His solution is to ask Congress to limit the NFL to appearing on only one or two networks.

Without television revenue, teams will continue to lose money, investors will stop investing and ultimately the USFL will fold. ABC holds rights to televise the USFL's spring games, but the league decided last year to switch from a spring to fall playing season

"How many investors can you get to come in if, in fact, you have shortfall, if you can't see a result of your investment, or the possibility of the result of your investment?" Usher asked. "It is difficult then to attract investors. So the people who are here don't necessarily have to have deeper pockets.

"It's the ability to attract deep pockets which is equally relevant. If there is an opportunity for a competitive window—the ability to televise on the network on Sunday - then I don't think we're going to have a problem." He declined to give specific examples of for fall games, saying that was part of the evidentiary process in the league's $1.3 billion antitrust sun against the NFL. That case is not expected to come to trial before the end of the year at the earliest.

Usher outlined the relevance of the NFL network alliance to Monday's hearings: "When you take this monopolistic position the NFL has, and it builds up and builds up so that the television revenues are a material portion, if not the material portion, of their revenues and economic base, then that mo-nopolistic position is used to restrict the number of franchises that divide into the number of television payments. In the 14 years in which they've held this monpolistic position. they've only expanded twice, Seattle and Tampa Bay in 1974.

"So year in, year out, you have all these cities like Jacksonville, Memphis, Phoenix and Indianapolis all applying for franchises. And they [the NFL] say no, because that dilutes the television, and the net result is that these teams have become so powerful.

"Then you throw on the Raiders case, allowing them to freely transfer arguably—because it's an antitrust violation to prohibit them — that these cities have basically gone paranoid. .. leveraged by the fact the team will move to them, in which case you make an incredible deal, or the team will move out from you, in which case they make an incredible deal to keep the team... But instead of addressing the problem — which is the monopolistic position that this is allowed to happen - they are going to consider bills that in fact enhance the monopolistic position, to restrict transfer, which is somewhat bizarre." And how does he think Congress will re-

"I don't know. Nobody's ever told them this before, I don't think, I'd like to compete. When you just refuse to deal, it's not fair. Just let us compete."

Usher represents a change in direction for USFL owners. He replaces Chet Simmons, a former network and cable sports executive whom the league hired as a front man with credibility among television people. In Usher, they have hired a day-to-day chief operating officer, a man who teamed with Peter Ueberroth to make the Los Angeles Olympics a financial and artistic success.

Usher gave up his Beverly Hills law practice five years ago to join the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee. He sees similarities between that job and this one.

"I remember telling people I was giving up my law practice and they said, 'Jeez, there aren't going to be any Olympics in 1984.' Carter had announced we might not go and there might not be another Olympics. They said, 'I don't know what you're doing.' That was a common comment when I started. In les Express.

that respect I find a lot of similarities, People say I signed a three-year agreement [for a reported $250,000 annually], but they don't think I'm going to have a league in a year."

But he has plenty of incentive to be suc-cessful. His deal with the USFL includes a percentage of any network television contract the league lands, according to The New York

It's been rather bectic during his two and a half weeks of official and unofficial time on the job. "In the Olympic Games, coming in five years before, I was able to set the agenda and the timetable in many respects. The difference here is that it's coming at me from every conceivable angle right now....It makes me dance faster.

But he already has started to bring some stability to a league in which he says only one team, the Tampa Bay Bandits, has a chance to be profitable this season. All the others, he predicted, will lose at least $1 million. He called his first league meeting last week. But the Suns were more than happy to have him back for the first time since he was injured in an exhibition game. The all-star guard tore ligaments in his left knee as a result of falling on a slippery Forum floor in an Oct. 9 preseason game against the Los Angles Lakers. "Walter was favoring his leg a little," said Coach John MacLeod. "But he's back. This is the begin-

Jet Attack in 6-2 Triumph

The Associated Press LANDOVER, Maryland - The last time Washington faced Winnipeg, the Jets blazed to a 7-5 victory, but the Capitals learned a valuable lesson. On Sunday, they tightened up their defense and slowed down the high-powered Winnipeg attack; the result was a 6-2 decision that fattened Washington's lead in the National Hockey League's Patrick

Division to eight points. Mike McEwen had two goals and two assists and Mike Gartner scored twice for the winners, who are ranked third in league defense. Winnipeg has too much firepower for us to play wide-open against them," said Coach Bryan Murray. Through most of the game, we had them under control."

They needed that control most in the third period. After building a 3-I lead on a McEwen goal and two others on which he assisted, the Capitals saw the margin trimmed to one late in second period. Winnipeg got off 13 shots at goaltender Pat Riggin in the next 13 minutes, but was unable to break through. Then Washington exploded for three goals in 78 seconds (one each by Gaetan Duchesne, Gartner and McEwen) to put the game away. Elsewhere it was Buffalo 6, Calgary 1; Edmonton 6, Hartford 3; St. Louis 6, Chicago 4; Detroit 5, New Jersey 5; Quebec 5, Minneso-ta 1, and Vancouver 4, the New York Rangers I.

McEwen, a defenseman signed last summer after being released by Los Angeles, didn't see his contribution as anything special. "Every game we have a hero, and it's usually a different one," he remarked.
"That's why we're in first place."

After 50 Years, 'Porgy' Finally Makes It to Met

By Samuel F. Freedman New York Times Service

FEW YORK - When George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" opened at the Alvin Theater in 1935, it received the chilly reception all too familiar for visionary works. Many drama critics championed the "folk op-era," as Gershwin described it, but their musical brethren ranged from the befuddled to the belligerent. The production ran for 124 performances but lost its $70,000 investment. Gershwin died two years later believing "Porgy and Bess" had been a failure.

Half a century later, "Porgy and Bess" is about to open at the Metropolitan Opera with Simon Estes and Grace Bumbry in the title roles. The Wednesday performance will be the Met's first of an opera that has played in more than 100 cities and graced the stage of La Scala 30 years ago. It is the ultimate Establishment embrace of a work that continues to stir controversy with its musical daring and its depiction of black life by three white men - Gershwin and his librettists, DuBose Heyward and Ira Gershwin. George Gershwin conceived of and wrote "Porgy and Bess" as an opera, with recitative instead of logue, with arias that others detached as songs, with choral and orchestral requirements be-yond the usual dimensions of Broadway. The fact that the original production played in the Al- operatic adaptations of two works vin had less to do with Gershwin's intentions than with two formidable hurdles he faced: making a snobbish intelligentsia accept his fusion of popular and serious mu- least one account Gershwin was sic and making a segregated opera world accept a serious work about black Americans.

The initial production of "Porgy and Bess," even with some paring to suit Broadway purposes, stayed closer to the work than did many of the more successful revivals. Only with the Cleveland Orchestra's recording in 1975 and the Houston Grand Opera's 1976 production, which played in New Met and the son of the opera's York, did "Porgy and Bess" re-chairman in the 1930s, suggests ceive faithful renditions. The that the Met's all-white company

Metropolitan Opera's version may be the truest of all. Like the Houston Grand Opera production, it is uncut; unlike that production, it is being performed without amplification in a major opera house as part of a repertory. According to various biogra-phies of Gershwin, the Met came close to mounting the maiden production of the opera. Otto Kahn, a wealthy patron of Gersh-win and the Metropolitan Opera. approached the composer about writing an American opera for the Met. Gershwin considered doing - the Jewish folk tale "The Dybbuk," and "Porgy," DuBose Hey-ward's novel about black life in Charleston, South Carolina. By at under contract to the Met for two years in the late 1920s.

But by the time he began work on "Porgy and Bess" in 1933, he held a commission not from the Metropolitan Opera but from the Theater Guild, one of the leading producers of Broadway plays. There were several possible causes for the shift. Anthony Bliss, the general manager of the Met and the son of the opera's and its financial woes during the Depression argued against staging a large work about blacks. The original cast ranged from classically trained vocalists to the vaudeville team of Buck and Bubbles. "Porgy and Bess" had a Broadway-style tryout in Boston during which Gershwin and the director, Rouben Mamoulian, agreed to some cuts — the "Jasbo Brown Blues" and Porgy's "buzzard song" among others - and then came amid great anticipation to New York Dehating the merits of Gersh-win's music had been one of New York's favorite parlor sports since the premiere of "Rhapsody in Blue" in 1924, and "Porgy and tion. The New York Times dispatched Brooks Atkinson, its drama critic, and Olin Downes, its music critic, to review "Porgy and Bess." Atkinson hailed the opera and praised Gershwin's music for adding a passion that the stage version of "Porgy" -- adapted by Dorothy Heyward from DuBose's novel — had not possessed. But Downes complained that Gershwin did not "utilize all the resources of the operatic composer or pierce very often to the depths of the simple and pathetic dra-

Members of the original production recall the disappointment they and Gershwin felt at the critical response. "Critics complained it wasn't opera, it wasn't a musical," said Mamoulian, now 86. "You give someone something delicious to eat and they complain because they have no name for it." Todd Duncan, the original Porgy, said, "What George said was that the opera people wouldn't come because they thought he couldn't write an opera and Broadway thought 'Georgie's gone high-hat on us.' George felt caught between."

"Porgy and Bess" also provoked arguments about its portrayal of blacks. It provided jobs and exposure for many black artists, including opera singers who had been unable to perform European works. Heyward had liberal racial views. But the question remained whether his characters were sensitively drawn or the same old whoring, gambling, superstitious stereotypes. The com-poser Duke Ellington once said Porgy and Bess" was "black on stage, white everywhere else." During a 1953 revival of the opera on Broadway, the black journalist James L. Hicks reviled "Porgy and Bess" as "the most insulting. the most libelous, the most degrading act that could possibly be perpetrated against colored Americans of modern times." Anne Brown, the original Bess, recalled: "My father, who was a doctor, didn't like it at all. He didn't want me to be in it. He said it perpetuated the image of blacks as lazy people, singing hymns and taking dope. A lot of the black educators thought it was Uncle Tom. But I felt that if it brought us forward in American music and in opera roles for black singers, then we should do it."

A revival directed by Cheryl Crawford of the Group Theater and starring Brown and Duncan played in 26 U.S. cities in 1942 and 1943. The U.S. State Department sent a production of "Porgy and Bess" with William Warfield and Leontyne Price to 29 countries in Europe, Asia and South America in the mid-1950s.

But "Porgy and Bess" was becoming more of a theater piece and less of an opera. For the 1959 film of "Porgy and Bess," André Previn wrote a new arrangement of the Gershwin score - and won an Academy Award for it. Only in the mid-1970s did the public hear the "Porgy and Bess" that Gershwin wrote.

At about that time, the Metropolitan Opera began to seriously consider mounting a production. The Gershwin estate requires that all productions use blacks for all the principal and chorus roles. By 1980, Bliss said, the Met found itself financially strong and its company had come to include dozens of black singers, including Estes and Bumbry. The produc-tion is costing $800,000. All 16 performances this season are sold

Anthropologist Disputes Mary Leakey Discovery

A South African anthropologist says that Mary Leakey mistakenly chiseled an "artificial heel" into newly-discovered ape-man fossil footprints in 1977 while attempting to excavate them because her eye. sight was failing. This led Leakey to believe she had uncovered prints of three ape-men, while there were only two, said Ronald Clarke, senior researcher of anatomy at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg. Clarke performed much of the site excavation near Olduvai Gorge in Tanzania under Mrs. Leakey's direction. The decilaration Saturday produced heater dispute among 250 early-man spe cialists from more than 10 countries celebrating the 60th anniversary of the news that the first discovery of an African ape-man-had been made by South African Raymond Dart, now 92. Michael Day, professor of anatomy at St. Thomas's Hospital, London, called Clark's charges "outrageous." Lea-key, now 71, belongs to the Kenyan family of archaeologists and anthropologists who contributed much of present knowledge of his man origins in eastern Africa.

Elizabeth Taylor says she took sleeping pills two at a time for 35 years and mixed the painkiller Percodan with alcohol before family and friends finally persuaded her to enter a rehabilitation program-Taylor also told The New York Times that she has decided to break off her engagement to Dennis: Stein, who would have become her eighth husband. Taylor spent seren weeks in the Berty Ford Center. a drug and alcohol rehabilitation facility near Palm Springs, California, Taylor, 52, said she entered the center after members of her family and actor Roddy McDowall visited her in a hospital. "Then they sate down and each read from papers they had prepared, each saying they loved me, each describing me dents they'd witnessed of my debilitation, and each saying that if I kept on the way I was with drugs. I would die," she said.

U.S. Ambassador to Austria Helene von Damm, 46, and Peter Guertler, 37, owner of Vienna's Hotel Sacher, were married Saturaday in Kitzbühel, the Tyrolean winter resort. It was her fourth marriage, his second.
